of CENTRAL OKLAHOMA

In June 2013, the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) announced its award of an “Our Town” grant to the Cultural Development Corporation of Central Oklahoma. The NEA grant is dedicated to support an art master plan to successfully implement and leverage the City of Oklahoma City’s One Percent for Art Ordinance. The ordinance, passed in 2009, requires that one percent of construction budgets for buildings and parks be allocated to public art. Developing an art master plan provides procedural guidance and policy recommendations for reviewing and commissioning public art in Oklahoma City. A Task Force was appointed to select a consultant and guide the process. The Task Force reported regularly to the Oklahoma City Arts Commission and the Cultural Development Corporation of Central Oklahoma. The Art Master Plan (AMP) seeks to improve the artist selection process, maximize artistic quality, and engage the broader arts community in planning for public art.

I. Introduction

Creative cities provide engaging environments for residents and visitors, extend opportunities for life-long learning, and help preserve community history and identity. Over the past two decades, Oklahoma City has been steadily transitioning into a modern, urban city that is proud of its unique Native American and Western heritage.

People move to and invest in cities that offer a strong link to arts and cultural activities. The One Percent For Art Ordinance, enacted in 2009, is one of the many ways Oklahoma City is demonstrating its commitment to building a great community in which to live, work, play, and visit. It also exemplifies the successful leveraging of private sector support for the city's economic development, community development, and tourism efforts.

Oklahoma City is coming into its own and is eager to expand its commitment to arts and culture. The 2010 Cultural Plan describes a city where artists are thriving, arts organizations are growing audiences and revenues, and where citizens of all ages are becoming life-long arts learners and patrons.

AMP UP OKC provides a wide variety of tools and options for energizing, enlivening, and invigorating the community's vision for public art. It combines broad goals and objectives with practical strategies for implementation. A unified vision updates the existing public art ordinance and establishes new administrative guidelines that reflect best practices in the public art field, a menu of priority projects, and identification of revenue sources and other resources for realizing these goals.

II. The Community

Oklahoma City is a dynamic and modern American city where rugged individualism and reserved sophistication thrive. Melding the past with the future, Oklahoma City is proud of its heritage and confident that current demographics prove that the city has evolved far beyond agriculture, ranching, and native and western heritage.

Growth is prolific. More people than ever before are deciding to stay. There's a growing number of international residents and visitors who reinforce the importance of the arts as a major part of the decision to make Oklahoma City their home.

The positive momentum is palpable. Oklahoma City is now home to a sophisticated audience of young people and a large creative class of artists and designers. Based on data from the U.S. Census Bureau (2009), the creative sector in the Oklahoma City Metropolitan Area accounted for 5.5% of all business establishments and 5.4% of all employees. A total of 1,724 creative establishments employed nearly 25,000 workers in 2009, representing $716 million in payroll. The arts, aesthetics --and particularly public art--are embraced as tangible opportunities to seize the future, balancing Oklahoma's unique history with the celebration of what it is and what it will become.

Acknowledged for its receptivity and willingness to embrace change, Oklahoma City prides itself as a community of energetic and passionate people who are dedicated to transforming ideas into reality. With strong leadership and citizenry committed to active participation in the decision-making process, the buzz and excitement of the city is continually renewed.

“Public art is more than aesthetics. It helps to create an overall environment.”

III. Evolution of an Art Master Plan for Oklahoma City

By Resolution in 1980, the City Council of Oklahoma City recognized the importance of arts and culture and that the artists, performers, and various artistic and cultural institutions make great contributions to our city by providing education, recreation, entertainment and culture.

City leaders knew that arts and cultural investments make cities great places to live, to travel and study, and more attractive for economic development. Their vision is supported by recent national studies that have found that cities with these types of community and economic benefits instill a sense of pride and loyalty in citizens often resulting in higher rates of economic growth.

The actions that followed the 1980 Resolution created the Oklahoma City Arts Commission to:

- Make regular assessments of the needs of the City concerning the arts.
- Advise Council on works of art to be placed on public property.
- Make recommendations to Council concerning grants from the public and private sectors, and when directed by Council, to oversee arts and cultural projects and programs.
- Increase the public’s awareness of the value of arts and cultural resources.
- Encourage greater arts and cultural involvement by departments of the City and greater utilization of private arts and cultural agencies for services to citizens.
- To advise Council concerning the coordination of projects and programs which involve arts and cultural matters.

By 2009, City Council recognized the importance of public art investment in leveraging community and economic value from public projects and enacted the One Percent for Art Ordinance requiring that one percent of the construction cost for any new [public building, or park, or major renovation] of public property using public funds be allocated for public art. Projects eligible for One Percent for Art will be referred to as Capital Improvement Projects (CIP) throughout this document.

Also that year, the City commissioned a Cultural Plan from the Cultural Development Corporation of Central Oklahoma. The consortium group of local corporate, non-profit and government leaders completed the Cultural Plan in 2010 and began implementation in early 2011. Recommendations were outlined in the plan that prioritized establishing an arts and culture position at the City and the need for a comprehensive art master plan.

In response, the City established an Arts & Cultural Affairs position in 2012 to oversee the Arts Commission and the One Percent for Art Program. The major goals of the program include:

- Leveraging the City’s public art investment to provide additional benefits to the City through multi-departmental projects, multi-agency projects and public/private partnerships.
- To obtain maximum benefit from the One Percent for Art Program, by fully integrating public art into implementation phases of key planning and development initiatives and other key strategies being developed by the various departments, trusts and authorities of the City as well as downtown, neighborhood, and commercial districts.

In July 2013, the Cultural Development Corporation of Central Oklahoma in partnership with the City of Oklahoma City received a prestigious Our Town grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in support of the Art Master Plan (AMP). The funding was dedicated to hire a consultant to develop a plan that will support the City’s One Percent for Art Ordinance. A Task Force was appointed by the Cultural Development Corporation, and was led by two Arts Commissioners, Liz Eickman and Jim Hasenbeck. The Task Force has worked alongside consultant Gail M. Goldman for over a year to identify people and opportunities and to shape the plan’s direction.

“Everything we have here we build. We have a perfect opportunity to create the city we want with this art master plan.”

Ken Fitzsimmons

“Public art is a reinvestment in the community, making history unintentionally.”

IV. Vision and Priorities

AMP UP OKC: An Art Master Plan for the City of Oklahoma City contains recommendations that were developed by the consultant following a thorough review of all relevant policies, plans, and procedures currently in place. In addition, information was gathered through individual and group interviews with more than 180 people (Appendix A: Methodology).

A number of topics were raised repeatedly throughout the individual interviews and focus group meetings. Whether an artist, designer, developer, arts advocate, resident, business owner, City staff, or student, what participants stated over and over is, “More art is better.”

The priorities that emerged are as follows:

- Commit to Quality. Set the bar as high as possible.
- Involve Artists Early in the Process. Fully integrate the artist into the design phases of eligible Capital Improvement Projects (CIP), Plans, Studies and Development Initiatives.
- Streamline Internal Allocation Process. Establish a mechanism within the City for automatic deposit of One Percent for Art funds from eligible Capital Improvement Projects (CIP).

“Set the bar as high as possible.”

OKC Resident

- Standardize Administrative Practices. Enhance public art program administrative practices internally by developing consistent standards and guidelines.
- Clarify Role of Arts Commission. Establish term limits for Arts Commissioners, diversify membership, and redefine roles.
- Simplify the Permit Process. Simplify the review and permitting process to encourage developers and neighborhood groups to install public art.
- Engage the Private Sector. Develop ways to encourage private developers to include public art in development projects.
- Expand Public Art into Neighborhoods. Create opportunities for public art to extend to Oklahoma City’s diverse neighborhoods.
- Provide a Resource for Finding Artists. Establish a preselected artist directory.
- Build Local Artist Capacity. Provide workshops and resources for artists to learn and explore the range of options for public art involvement.
- Create a Mechanism to Accept Gifts of Artwork. Develop a policy, guidelines, and criteria for the donation and loan of artwork to the City.
- Inventory Potential Public Art Sites. Create a list of existing sites as a reference for placement of permanent and temporary artwork throughout the neighborhoods and downtown.
- Increase Visibility of Public Art in Oklahoma City. Promote the arts locally, regionally and internationally through tourism initiatives, social media, and public presentations.

These topics are explored, and recommendations are made in this document that center on the creation, presentation, and promotion of public art that inspires and communicates the City’s commitment to the social, economic, and cultural well-being of Oklahoma City and its citizens.

GOALS

Update policies and procedures to meet national standards and best practices in the field of public art.

Provide opportunities for more public art throughout the city.

V. Goals & Recommendations

BACKGROUND

The City of Oklahoma City Council created an Arts Commission by ordinance in 1980, recognizing the importance of professional advisors in guiding decision-making related to arts and culture. In 2009, the City Council adopted a One Percent for Art Ordinance reinforcing its commitment to arts and culture and defining a policy for budgeting public funds for the selection and placement of works of art on City-owned property.

In 2012, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs was firmly established with the hiring of an Arts Liaison under the Planning Department. With two years of solid administrative oversight and five years' experience implementing the One Percent for Art Ordinance, the City of Oklahoma City is at the ideal point in its evolution to institute change.

As the national profile of Oklahoma City continues to rise, it's important that the policies and procedures related to public art are updated to meet best practices in the field of public art. Enough time has passed for the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs to know what works and doesn't work, and yet early enough in its development to easily make substantial, positive changes.

CITY PROCESSES AND PROCEDURES

ONE PERCENT FOR ART ORDINANCE

If an ordinance is vague, it is open to interpretation, which is likely to result in inconsistencies in implementation and misunderstanding about its purpose. Therefore, providing the broadest and clearest definitions to accurately represent the specific objectives inherent to the public art ordinance is critical to its success.

To bring Oklahoma City’s ordinances to current national standards and best practices in the field of public art, and to provide adequate information on the purpose, requirements, and procedures necessary to implement it, the following key changes are recommended.

RECOMMENDATION

Revise Municipal Code 38-487 to 38-494 Public Art Ordinance and Municipal Code 38-495 to 38-510 Arts Commission and combine them as one ordinance dedicated to arts and culture (Appendix B: Revised One Percent For Art Ordinance).

ARTS COMMISSION

Since the 1980’s, the Arts Commission has expertly guided the development of public art in Oklahoma City. Many of the same commissioners continue to serve because of their experience and track record. As the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs matures, the composition of the Arts Commission can now be redefined to better reflect the diverse demographics of the city. This can be accomplished through establishing term limits and developing by-laws.

With a large and enviable creative community from which to draw, it is time to infuse the Arts Commission with new energy, perspective, and ideas to help the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs flourish. New expertise, connections, and demographic representation--which is sorely lacking--are qualities that will benefit the City as an organization and the community it serves.

There are important ways for the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs to further engage members who rotate off the Arts Commission. They can serve on committees, artist selection panels, and they can become mentors to future community leaders, as well as serve as special ambassadors who advocate for the arts on a local, statewide, and national basis. Former members can be appointed to City design and planning commissions as well as serve on other boards of universities, foundations, and organizations like the Downtown Oklahoma City, Inc.'s public art subcommittee.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Redefine and clarify the role of the Arts Commission as policy-makers and advocates.
- Broaden membership to better represent Oklahoma City's diversity including culture, age, and gender.
- Expand expertise among Commissioners to include arts industry-related experience such as curators, art historians, conservators.
- Use former Commissioners on committees and artist selection panels.
- Maintain three-year terms and establish a limit of two terms.
- Stagger rotation of current Commissioners and appointments of new Commissioners.
- Develop and adopt by-laws consistent with other City boards and commissions.

MURALS

Oklahoma City’s Municipal Code 2010 includes murals under Advertising and Signs. Murals are public artworks and can be more appropriately part of the revised arts and culture ordinance as evidenced by current language that clearly states “a mural shall not be considered an accessory or non-accessory sign” and that “murals shall be submitted to the Arts Commission for review and comment.”

Because murals are not signs that require a licensed sign contractor, a signage permit is unnecessary, excessive, and discouraging to private business owners and developers who choose to enhance their property with original artwork.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Address murals in the revised arts and culture ordinance.
- Consider eliminating signage permit requirements and associated fees for murals.
- Revise existing Municipal Code 2010, Advertising and Signs, to (1) exclude murals and (2) define and acknowledge murals as public art requiring review and approval oversight by the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs and the Arts Commission.

APPLICABILITY

When the One Percent for Art Ordinance was adopted, applicability was limited to new and rehabilitated buildings and park development projects. Buildings were defined as convention centers, sports arenas, transit stations and facilities where public meetings and public educational or training sessions are held. Excluded were pump stations, warehouses, and by practice, streetscape, sidewalk, road, and bridge improvements.

Throughout the country, it is the standard for percent for art allocations to apply to all capital construction projects with the exception of below-ground utility projects. The majority of pump stations are built in neighborhoods and often are considered aesthetic eyesores, which could be ameliorated through the integration or application of public art. Road and streetscape improvements provide a unique opportunity to enhance a business district, neighborhood, and stretch of monotonous roadway.

By broadening the applicable construction projects, a greater number of public artworks can be realized thereby meeting one of the primary community goals, which is increasing the availability, accessibility, and growth of public art throughout the city.

RECOMMENDATION

- Consider including all Capital Improvement Projects (CIP) as applicable with the exception of below-ground utility construction projects in the revised Municipal Code 38-487. This would apply to future City projects, not Trusts and Authorities.

ALLOCATION & TRANSFER OF ONE PERCENT FOR ART FUNDS

The current process for determining the percent for art allocation and subsequent transfer of funds is complex and inconsistent. Without consistent standards to calculate the percent for art, including a published list of restricted and unrestricted funds, the transfer of money to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs frequently is delayed. This delay is natural for a new program, but steps can be taken to assure that funds are identified and transferred as early as possible.

This is important because when delays occur, the opportunity for artwork to be integrated into the architecture, landscape, and urban design of a site is compromised. When the artist is selected at or near project completion, the options for public art are considerably limited. With access to decision-making from the inception of the design process, the artist’s ideas can help shape aspects of the site and the building, thereby creating a relationship of maximum impact between the art and the building project. Even if the overall design and construction process is unclear, or if the artwork is expected to be fabricated and installed later in the construction process, it is important to ensure that the artist has access to the broadest possible opportunities.

The Five Year Capital Improvement Projects Plan anticipates new construction projects. This resource enables the One Percent for art allocation to be proactively calculated, based on the budget estimates prepared by the department forwarding the construction project request. Once the City Council approves the budget, the funding for public art can be transferred to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs at the same time the funding for design, engineering, and construction is transferred to the relevant department.

The most successful administrative structure is one that minimizes bureaucratic complications and simplifies financial transactions. To help streamline the allocation process, it would be advantageous for the Finance Department to host a meeting with the Public Works Department to determine the optimal timing and method for facilitating early budget estimates and invoicing of the percent for art funds. This would expedite a timely transfer of funds to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs, thereby enabling artist selection to take place at the inception of the project's design process (Appendix H: Percent for Art Allocation and Selection Process Flow Chart).

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Through a joint meeting of the Finance and Public Works Departments, establish a procedure for eligible projects that will facilitate early budgeting of One Percent for Art Projects and enable project identification as early as possible.
- Distribute a monthly CIP report to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs.

ART CONSERVATION FUND

To ensure that projects are provided with adequate long-term care, funding needs to be set aside that effectively serves as an endowment and exists in perpetuity. To the extent permitted by law and funding source restrictions, five percent (5%) of each percent for art allocation would be set aside in a separate pooled, interest-bearing account for the repair and conservation of artwork in the City's public art collection.

RECOMMENDATION

- Research laws and funding source restrictions, including General Obligation Bond (GO Bond) funds, to consider establishing an Art Conservation Fund in the revised Municipal Code 38-487.

PUBLIC ART DONATIONS

A mechanism to receive cash donations and grants in support of public art is needed. Funds accumulated would be stipulated for public art programs, education, conservation, and special initiatives throughout Oklahoma City that include the following expenditures:

- Acquisition and commissioning of new artwork.
- Artist selection processes including artist fees for proposal development, materials, and travel.
- Community outreach and publicity.
- Public art project documentation including photographs and video.
- Services of a professional conservator to conduct condition surveys, repair, and conservation of City-owned artwork.

RECOMMENDATION

- Use the Special Purpose Fund to account for public art contributions.

GIFTS AND LOANS OF ARTWORK POLICY

When gifts and loans of visual artwork are proposed for placement on public land and in buildings owned by the City of Oklahoma City, it is critical that the proposals are reviewed using the same criteria applied to the commissioning and exhibition of other artworks undertaken through the City. The primary objectives of a Donation Policy are to:

- Provide deliberate, uniform procedures for the review and acceptance of gifts and loans of public artwork to the City.
- Maintain high artistic standards in all artwork displayed by the City.
- Facilitate more cohesive planning for the placement of artwork in the city.
- Include evaluating the cost to the City when considering a donation and including that cost in the decision-making process.

RECOMMENDATION

- Adopt a Policy for Review and Acceptance of Gifts and Loans of Visual Artwork to the City of Oklahoma City, with review and recommendation by the Arts Commission and approval by City Council (Appendix C: Gifts and Loans of Artwork Policy).

DEACCESSION OF ARTWORK POLICY

It is important for the City to retain the right to remove any artwork in the public art collection that, among other considerations, requires excessive maintenance, poses public safety risks, is damaged beyond repair, or is adversely affected by changes in the site. It is critical that considerations of removal and relocation of an artwork are governed by careful, standardized procedures that represent best professional practices in the field of public art and serve to insulate the deaccessioning process from fluctuations in personal taste.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Adopt a Deaccession Policy for the removal and disposition of artwork on City-owned land and in City-owned facilities for review and recommendation by the Arts Commission and approval by City Council (Appendix D: Deaccession Policy).

PUBLIC ART WORKPLAN

An annual Public Art Workplan is an important tool in charting current and future public art projects and determining resources and funding priorities. It serves to inform the policy-makers, City staff, and the public about the activities and opportunities available through the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs.

Planning for public art needs to balance the long-range with the near-term. To ensure operational consistency and accountability, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs needs annually to identify new projects to be initiated within that fiscal year and provide a status report on current and completed projects.

The Workplan is to be updated each fiscal year and include:

- Public art projects that will be initiated within the following one-year period.
- Budget and funding source for each project.
- Location of each project and identification of community partners.
- Estimated timeline for project initiation and completion.
- Projects currently funded and in progress noting selected artist(s) and estimated project completion.

RECOMMENDATION

- Develop an annual Public Art Workplan for review and recommendation by the Arts Commission and approval by the City Manager.

PERMITTING FOR PUBLIC ART

Neighborhood and private sector arts advocates continue to be challenged as they attempt to navigate the complex zoning, design review, licensing, and permit requirements of Oklahoma City government. What they need is a simple and straightforward document for public art describing the permitting and review requirements, including what steps need to be taken, expectations of City staff and decision-makers, contact info and locations, as well as estimated time and cost obligations. Clear and consistent public art procedures will greatly improve the permitting experience and serve to encourage neighborhood organizations and private developers to commit to advocating for more public art in Oklahoma City.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Support and empower neighborhood groups and artists in the effort to place art in their communities.
- Find ways to streamline and simplify the permitting process.
- Provide access to a list of pre-qualified artists to make identification of artists suitable for neighborhoods projects easier to find.
- Provide access to a list of pre-qualified licensed engineers to enable neighborhood groups and artists to engage the services of licensed professionals to prepare calculations and construction drawings required for City review and to assist in obtaining a required permit.

“Seeing public art is free. There are no tickets. People don’t have to dress up. You can view it alone or in groups. It’s open to everyone.”

Mary Blankenship Pointer

URBAN DESIGN AND PLANNING FRAMEWORK FOR PUBLIC ART

Incorporating public art into the fundamental aspects of planning elevates the quality of the urban environment and promotes a cohesive vision for the character of public places and neighborhoods. Including public art considerations in General Plan updates, Strategic Plans, and Master Plans redefines the relationship of art to urban space as an integral part of the urban infrastructure and the natural environment.

When public art is addressed at the planning level, it can contribute to economic prosperity, create great public spaces, foster cultural diversity, and attract tourists—all while celebrating the distinctiveness of Oklahoma City and its neighborhoods. Artwork enlivens the pedestrian experience by serving as a point of reference, landmark, or critical linkage.

All appropriate general, strategic, and master planning documents should include a set of prioritized public art goals and opportunities. When implemented, the inclusion of public art becomes part of the vision and is further refined in relevant design standards and other implementation documents. Future plans should:

- Identify and define public art goals, guidelines, and opportunities that include the examination of character, connections, history, and land uses.
- Outline criteria for placement of public art, including appropriate material and scale.
- Classify high-visibility placement opportunities.
- Describe programming ideas for temporary public art installations and performances.

Opportunities to address public art in existing or developing plan areas include:

- Incorporating public art in the development of the Downtown Development Framework.
- Integrating public art opportunities into the implementation of the 2014 Oklahoma City Parks Master Plan.
- For neighborhood parks with existing landscape maintenance contracts with the City, include language that encourages artist-created amenities.
- Establish arts and culture stakeholder groups within neighborhood and district planning initiatives.

RECOMMENDATION

- Incorporate public art into planning processes to enhance community development, economic development, and social enrichment goals of Oklahoma City.

ADMINISTRATION

OFFICE OF ARTS & CULTURAL AFFAIRS

PROGRAM MANAGEMENT

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs is ably managed through the strong and visionary leadership of the Arts Liaison who was hired to fill the new position in 2012. Tasked with oversight of millions of dollars of public art and a public art process that involves multiple departments and review bodies, the role of the Arts Liaison has expanded significantly since the position was first established.

The increasing volume of projects, focus on partnerships, new program initiatives and policy changes recommended in this Art Master Plan (AMP) require a sufficient workforce of experienced and dedicated staff to achieve success. This includes developing the annual Public Art Workplan, staffing the Arts Commission and its committees, and being an advocate and spokesperson for the program both within City government and throughout the community (Appendix J: Public Art Staff Responsibilities).

STAFF

Administering a public art program is complex, time-consuming, and staff-intensive. A $5,000 project and a $500,000 public art project require similar amounts of staff and administrative resources. Public art projects have long selection processes and fabrication timelines, often spanning three to seven years. Even if the pace of City construction projects reduces over time, administrative costs will not decrease since projects in progress will continue to demand attention.

Currently, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs has one full-time position and one part-time intern (29 hours per week) tasked with providing program services for an estimated $1.7million in One Percent for Art projects (Appendix H: Percent for Art Projects). In addition, the staff oversees the work of the Arts Commission, Cultural Planning and implementation, provides collection care, works to secure additional financial resources like grants, and helps the private sector navigate the City's review and approval process.

A hallmark of the City of Oklahoma City is operating with minimal staff. With that in mind, the City may choose to retain independent consultants to assist with large-budget public art projects such as the MAPS 3 Convention Center, and other areas where consultants are appropriate including oversight of curatorial work, conservation, marketing, education and outreach programs.

The Office of Arts and Cultural Affairs has been fortunate to attract recent art college graduates as paid interns. They provide invaluable assistance to the Liaison by conducting research, preparing reports, helping to staff Arts Commission and Task Force meetings, and coordinating artist selection processes. As practicing artists, the interns have contributed invaluable input and ideas on a range of public art projects and special initiatives.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Consider staffing needs through annual Public Art Workplan development and department general fund budget preparation.
- Evaluate classification for the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs positions.
- Expand paid artist interns as Public Art Workplan and general fund resources allow.

TRUSTS AND AUTHORITIES

The City Council had the great foresight to encourage any Trust and Authority to which the City is beneficiary to adopt the One Percent for Art Ordinance defined within Municipal Code 38-487. Equally impressive is the fact that the Trusts and Authorities of the City have made a commitment by Resolution to incorporate the One Percent for Art provision into future projects.

Since the Trusts and Authorities (see Diagram 1.0) are decentralized and operate independently with separate boards, the acquisition, management, and maintenance of each respective One Percent for Art project falls under the sole jurisdiction of the Trust or Authority who commissions it. However, for the artwork to be considered part of the City's overall public art collection, the project must be reviewed by the Arts Commission which in turn makes a recommendation to the Trust or Authority Board. As an example, the Airport Trust advertises and selects public art for airport facilities, which is then reviewed and recommended by the Oklahoma City Arts Commission.

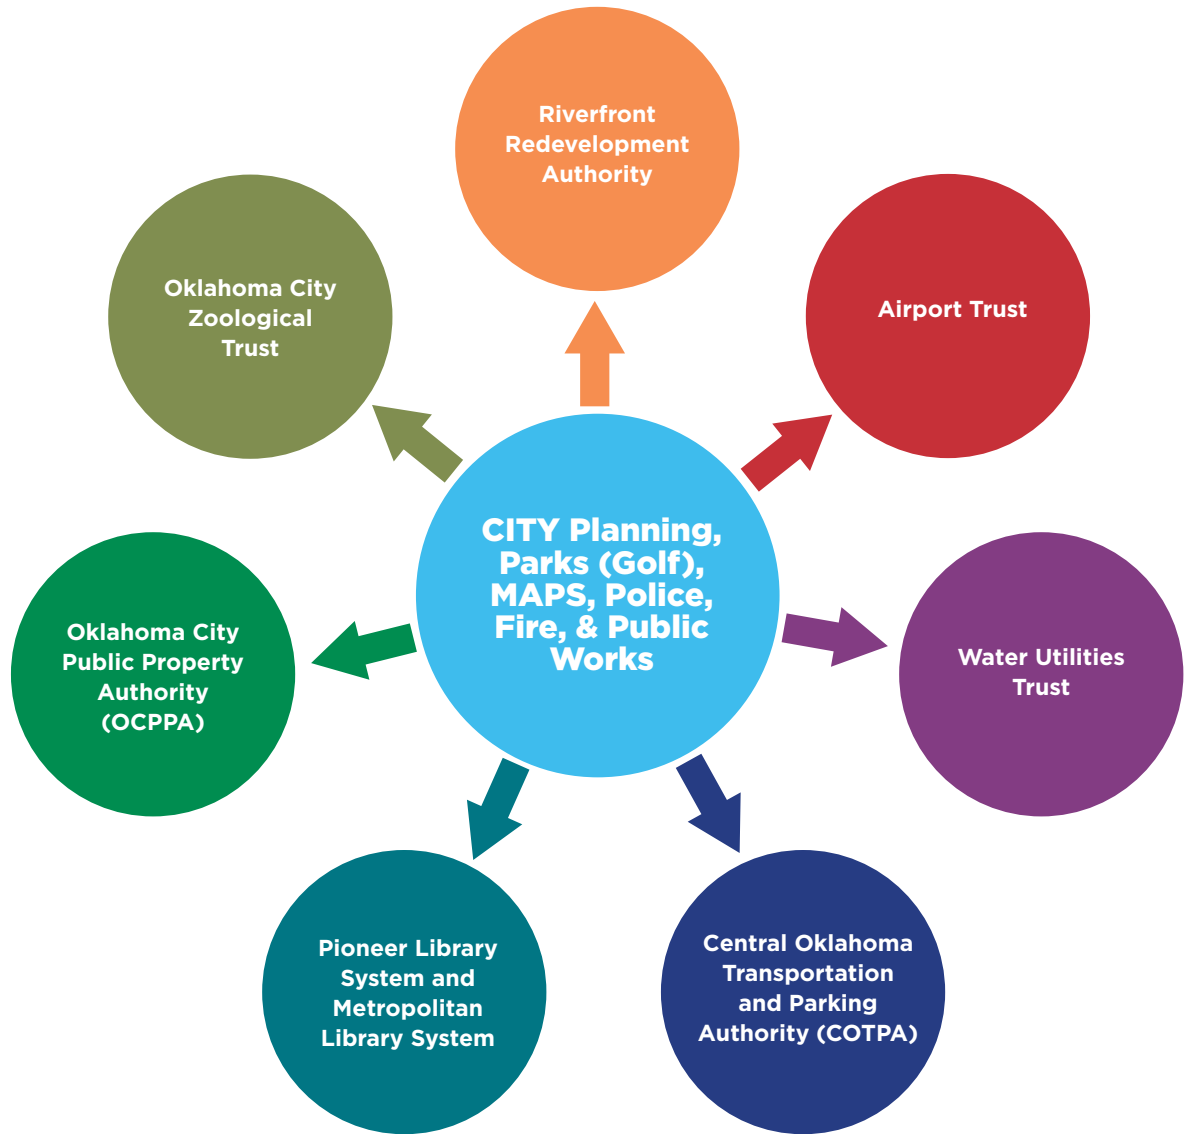

All Trusts and Authorities have the option to pay a fee for the expert services of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs staff. Initiating these reciprocal relationships and utilizing the City as the implementing agency is the most efficient way to put into place a comprehensive public art program that serves the broad interests of Oklahoma City.

On a case-by-case basis, any Trust can negotiate an agreement or memo of understanding with Arts & Cultural Affairs to assist with:

- Site location and artist selection
- Artist contracts
- Art handling services
- Maintenance and conservation studies
- Repair and conservation services
- Promotion and marketing of the public art collection
- Public education and tours

DIAGRAM 1.0

Relationship of City Departments to Trusts and Authorities

CITY DEPARTMENTS

There is a strong need to develop policies and procedures to reinforce professional practice and consistency. To do this, it is important that Department Heads develop a better understanding of the benefits of public art and recognize that the process is unique from other City procedures.

Establishing administrative guidelines will serve to facilitate operations, explain legal requirements, and reflect best practices in the public art field. Defining the review and approval processes and the roles and responsibilities of City staff, Arts Commission, other review bodies, City Manager, and City Council, will make the public art process easier to navigate. In addition to guiding City department staff, the guidelines serve to inform the general public in understanding the goals, policies, and procedures of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs.

To help City department staff understand the positive impact of public art, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs staff could make a presentation during regularly scheduled departmental staff meetings. This would further reinforce the role of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs as the first point of contact for all City public art projects. Conversely, it is important that the Arts & Culture Liaison have access to information related to activities of other City departments as they relate to projects eligible for the One Percent for Art Ordinance.

In instances where a Capital Improvement Project (CIP) is large in scale and scope and the One Percent for Art budget is comparable, it is advisable to consider developing an area-specific physical art master plan. This would be the case for the MAPS 3 Fairgrounds Exposition Center, Public Park, Convention Center, and for certain trail projects where multiple facilities need to be considered as a cohesive, unified whole.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Develop and publish guidelines to establish consistent practices for the administration of One Percent for Art projects.
- Schedule presentations by Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs staff with City Departments involved in or undertaking future public art projects.
- Include Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs Liaison as part of project teams to strengthen project communication.
- Develop physical art master plans for large and complex buildings, sites and campuses to aid in guiding materials, scale, placement and maintenance of commissioned public artwork.
- Clarify and publish the role of committees and commissions as it pertains to the review and approval of proposed public art projects.

ROLE OF CITY DEPARTMENT COMMITTEES & COMMISSIONS VIS-À-VIS ARTS COMMISSION

For public art projects that fall within the jurisdiction of City committees and commissions such as the Park Commission or Golf Commission, it is important that the role be defined as it pertains to the review of public art in the Capital Improvement Project (CIP).

For example, criteria appropriate to Park Commission review of public art may include the following:

- Does the art take away from green space?
- Does it change the fundamental function of the park?
- Is it appropriate for the space?
- How does it impact public use of the park?
- Is it resistant to vandalism, graffiti, and other potential damage?

Review and approval of all other specifics of a proposed artwork for municipal construction projects—including artist, art concept, style, materials, colors and other artwork details—is the responsibility of the Arts Commission.

CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT PROJECT (CIP) PROJECT IMPLEMENTATION

The timing of the artist selection process is critical to the successful integration of public art into any CIP. Pivotal to that success is the recognition on the part of the architectural community of the value of including an artist in the design process. Optimally, the artist needs to be selected by the time the schematic design is developed so he/she can be on board by the design development phase.

To assure optimal communication and coordination, it is vital that the artist attend the project pre-construction meeting. This is the most efficient and effective way for the artist to have equal access to pertinent schedules, timelines, and other construction details as well as key personnel.

PROJECT ARCHITECT SELECTION

To reinforce the City's commitment and expectations regarding public art in Capital Improvement Projects (CIP), it is important to provide advance notice regarding the One Percent for Art requirement in all Requests for Qualifications to potential project consultants. In addition, language regarding the consultant's responsibility to work with artists needs to be included in the contract between the City and the consultant.

During interviews, it is useful to include questions regarding the consulting firm's experience working with artists and the firm's approach to public art. To assist in the assessment of the firm's, it is recommended that the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs Liaison participate on the interview panel.

RECOMMENDATION

- To assist in the assessment of the candidates for CIP project design lead, it is recommended that the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs Liaison participate on the interview panel.

ARTIST SELECTION PROCESS

There are a number of opportunities to streamline the artist selection process in an effort to get the project artist on board as early as possible in the design process.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Establish a directory of pre-qualified artists for public art projects under $25,000.
- Create a pool of professional public art experts approved by the Arts Commission from which the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs staff may choose.
- As artist applications increase in numbers, consider convening a panel of visual arts professionals to pre-screen applications with at least one member also serving on the stakeholder selection committee.
- If One Percent for Art Project numbers exceed staffing resources, consider contracting additional personnel to support the artist selection process, similar to outside consultant support for MAPS 3.

MAINTENANCE

The image and value of the City's public art collection depends on the work being in good condition, which requires careful documentation, monitoring, and maintenance. The City currently owns 100 artworks valued at over $10 million dollars that need to be inventoried, chronicled, and catalogued on a regular basis.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Conduct an annual condition survey of all City-owned artwork. Include a condition report on each artwork and prioritized recommendations for restoration, repair, or maintenance as needed.
- Ensure that routine maintenance of the artwork, by the City department under whose jurisdiction the artwork is located, occurs with some regularity. Ensure that all repair and restoration of the artwork is completed with the highest standards of professional conservation practice.
- Proactively address maintenance and conservation needs for new artwork being commissioned and purchased by the City by facilitating a technical review of the artist's conceptual and final design in consultation with a public art professional or art conservator.
- Offer periodic workshops on maintenance needs and practices to City field workers in departments responsible for maintaining the artwork.

NEW FUNDING CONSIDERATIONS

As traditional arts funding sources come under pressure, local governments are finding the need to develop new mechanisms to maintain and increase arts and culture support. The following paragraphs describe examples from other cities. It is recommended that Oklahoma City research local and state laws in these areas and consider if any of the following ideas can be utilized to build and sustain resources for on-going support of public art in Oklahoma City.

TAX INCREMENT FINANCE (TIF) DISTRICTS

Tax increment financing is an economic tool that cities are authorized to use in promoting development in underserved and blighted areas. A percentage of TIF funds can be used in newly established TIF districts for public art. The City of Oklahoma City has eight tax increment financing districts, all located at or near the core of the city.

DEVELOPER FEES

A developer fee is a one-time charge imposed by cities and applied to new development to help fund offsite improvements such as parks, open space, and public art. Establish a $100 Developer Fees as a funding source for public art, an inconsequential amount for private and single family residential development.

FRIENDS OF PUBLIC ART FOR OKLAHOMA CITY

Find a qualified non-profit organization to serve as fiscal agent for the purpose of receiving donated funds for public art. This provides a mechanism for individuals and businesses to contribute funds for the purpose of building a city's public art collection.

ONE DOLLAR CHECK-OFF

Cities are including a one dollar ($1.00) fee for public art in utility payments to encourage residents and business owners to voluntarily contribute one dollar per year to support public art acquisitions and initiatives. For example, Edmond and Norman already use a check-off box on utility bills for this purpose.

GENERAL FUND

Annual line item allocations from the City's general fund are often designated to support specific program and project initiatives that result in the acquisition of a permanent artwork.

Principles reiterated as fundamental to the value of public art in Oklahoma City:

Public art reinforces a sense of identity and place-making while connecting people to their history and culture as well as to those of other traditions.

Public art lifts community spirit and pride while enhancing civic involvement as people gather to experience and be inspired by creative works in the public realm.

Public art affects how people relate to each other.

PUBLIC EDUCATION & MARKETING

The success of a public art program is measured in part by the community's awareness of and respect for public artwork as a cultural resource. How public education is handled can make a significant difference in public reception of a project. By building a regular program of educational and promotional activities, a sense of community ownership can be instilled and cultivated. These activities can generate broader community appreciation of public art and recognition of the contribution public art makes in creating meaningful places.

A major priority for Oklahoma City's arts community is encouraging broader thinking on what defines public art. A comprehensive program of community education and outreach, directed to the general public and to the numerous special constituencies affected by the program, would help establish Oklahoma City as a community that recognizes and supports the importance of public art.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Build public expectation for exceptional quality public art.
- Provide access to online information about the public art collection.
- Continue to evaluate the effectiveness of communicating in more than one language as demographics change.

“Public Art brings surprise and emotion, whether or not you like the artwork. If you like the art, the place becomes more inspiring. If you don’t, you might appreciate the surrounding a little more. The place becomes more meaningful for everyone.”

Arjan Jager

PROJECT STAKEHOLDERS

A specific aspect of advocacy and development is the outreach and interaction that occurs with a community of project stakeholders. When a new public art project begins, it is important that the project stakeholders have accurate information about the project and the art selection process. This allows stakeholders to appropriately engage in the art selection process, assist in developing goals and objectives that help define the success of the public art project, realize the most benefit, and ultimately become spokespeople and resources for public art in their community.

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs is responsible for fostering ownership by involving stakeholders in the artist selection process. The aptly-titled “Stakeholder Selection Committee” meets three times—first for a project overview and selection process orientation, next to adjudicate artist submissions, and finally to interview artist finalists and review their artwork proposals to make a final recommendation.

OUTREACH

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs has maintained a strong presence on social media, sharing announcements, events and links through social media platforms like Facebook, MailChimp, Pinterest, and Twitter. These platforms allow a page owner to trace metrics around posted content tracking growth and demographics, consumption of content and creation of content. In addition, photographs of the artwork fabrication and installation processes, special exhibitions, and other activities are regularly posted by staff on social media and to the site, Culture Now: Museum Without Walls, for the public to view.

FINDING NEW WAYS TO ENGAGE THE PUBLIC

There are a number of public education and outreach options available to keep the community engaged and informed. These initiatives help foster ownership in what’s being created and build a better understanding of the value of public art. The audience is vast, including artists and design professionals, schools, neighborhoods and diverse communities, corporate and private development interests, and public sector officials.

PUBLIC ART TOOLKIT

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs could develop a public art “toolkit” with curriculum developed specifically for teachers, and for use by community leaders, that provides information and examples of all aspects of public art from contemporary ideas and resources to a guide to the process of creating and maintaining public art. Excellent examples are the Public Art Toolkit developed by Forecast Public Art (<http://forecastpublicart.org/toolkit/>) and The Public Art Roadmap: How to Start, Build, and Maintain a Public Art Project in Your Neighborhood developed by the City of Seattle Public Art Program (<http://www.seattle.gov/arts/publicart/roadmap.asp>)

SOCIAL MEDIA

As technology continues to advance, it is important for the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs to retain a healthy online presence. Social media is a way for artists and the general public to connect with the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs and establish itself as a valuable resource. The City can participate in a variety of social media platforms to raise awareness of upcoming artist opportunities, exhibitions, and special public art events and activities.

VIDEO

The City’s public art collection, temporary and permanent installations, and special events can be brought to life through video sharing channels like YouTube and Vimeo, allowing the public to discover and share original videos. Skydance Bridge and the Centennial Land Run Monument are already posted on YouTube.

For future consideration, an Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs channel could be established on these networks to allow a page owner to track demographics and consumption of content.

Content can be searched through a database; viewers can “like” and comment on favorite videos, share embedded videos on their own personal social media networks and blogs, and subscribe to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs channel for a one source video feed.

SMART PHONE

According to Pew Research, over 60% of the U.S. population uses smart phones. The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs could develop a smart phone application specific to its art collection with linkages to information on the artists. A portal could be placed on each artwork that links to the Arts & Cultural Affairs website, artist’s website, and other resources utilizing Quick Response I or GPS coordinates. These same resources could link important cultural sites and cultural assets like theatres and performance venues.

INTERACTIVE PROJECTS

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs can engage with location-based, ‘check-in’ social media platforms like Gowalla and FourSquare to encourage users to interact with temporary projects and changing exhibitions. These social media platforms allow users to keep up with their friends from Facebook and Twitter, discover new places and hotspots, share photos and trip recommendations with friends and pick-up rewards from places where they check-in.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Develop and promote guided and self-guided public art tours of Downtown through apps and other online resources.
- Commission economic studies and provide testimonials to elevate awareness of public art.
- Provide consistent identification markers on all public artwork owned by the City.
- Provide presentations that illustrate the vision for public art in Oklahoma City to neighborhoods, districts, civic groups and City staff.
- Collaborate with local educational institutions, art organizations and museums to co-host educational programs, workshops, and lectures by sharing venues, professional resources, and funding.

NEIGHBORHOOD INITIATIVES

Public art is an effective tool for economic and community development, serving as a driver for neighborhood revitalization and cultural tourism. Expanding opportunities for public art to urban and rural neighborhoods throughout Oklahoma City was a priority communicated repeatedly in interviews and focus group sessions. Residents recognize that public art can make neighborhoods more inviting, inclusive, and safe, and that public art can be used as a tool for promoting the community.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Find ways to use public art as a tool to celebrate the diverse populations that are integral to Oklahoma City’s past and present.
- Through public art, stimulate cultural exchange in public engagement and educational programming.

PROJECT IDEAS

Based on input from Oklahoma City’s residents, including artists, arts and business communities, and City staff, the following project ideas are offered to encourage the exhibition of public art throughout Oklahoma City.

INVENTORY POTENTIAL SITES

Creating an inventory of potential public art sites throughout Oklahoma City neighborhoods provides an opportunity to engage residents, business districts, artists, and civic leaders in the identification of locations where permanent and temporary art could be placed. In this way, public art becomes a cohesive and integral part of the larger vision for each neighborhood. These inventories can serve as the “go-to resource” and roadmap for funding and donations of artwork. Locations and opportunities can range from gateways, to directional signage, and from park locations for large-scale artwork to interventions of artwork in unexpected places.

“Art amplifies the tourism experience.”

SITES FOR ARTWORK CAN BE SELECTED THAT:

- Anchor individual communities and neighborhoods.
- Are shared by and significant to several contiguous neighborhoods.
- Are expected and intended to attract people from other parts of the city.
- Are of historical, cultural, or civic importance to the community and serve as a destination and gathering point for the general populace.
- Are clustered near each other or overlap, creating a convergence and synergy.
- Make a strong visual and programmatic impact.

ROTATING SCULPTURE IN MEDIANS AND PARKS

Work with groups interested in adopting specific areas throughout Oklahoma City to designate as outdoor galleries for the display of sculpture for long-term loan (12-24 months). Placing sculpture on medians, parks, plazas and other heavily trafficked areas with high visibility would enliven the landscape, create a dynamic visual experience for residents and visitors, and establish more venues for artwork in the city.

To accommodate the sculptures, individual platforms and lighting would need to be constructed to code on each predetermined site. Artists could be invited to submit images of existing artwork for review and if selected, would be responsible for the transportation and installation of the artwork. Each artist could receive a predetermined stipend. The works could also be made available for sale.

GREAT IDEAS COMPETITION

Work with groups interested in establishing a “Great Ideas Competition” open to artists to propose ideas for temporary public art on a site of their choosing. Artists could submit a letter of interest and qualifications. Each selected artist could receive a fixed fee for the design, fabrication, and installation of the artwork. This is an important opportunity for artists new to public art to gain experience.

ARTISTS IN RESIDENCE

Work with groups interested in developing an Artist In Residence Program in neighborhood schools, recreation centers, libraries, or other institutions in which artists work with residents to create permanent or temporary art installations. To encourage cultural exchange, artists from one neighborhood could conduct residencies in another.

SHARING STORIES

Develop educational programs in schools and libraries utilizing high school students to conduct interviews with long-time neighborhood residents and commission interactive artwork utilizing the spoken word.

TRADITIONAL ARTS APPRENTICESHIP

Offer an apprenticeship program focused on traditional forms of expression that have been an important part of Oklahoma City for many years. Non-profit arts organizations and artist groups working to sustain, develop, and perpetuate community-based traditional art forms can be important developers of these programs. An apprenticeship program enables master traditional artists to pass along their unique knowledge and skills to promising novice artists. The master artist would work with the apprentice on a one-on-one basis over an agreed upon period of time to teach specific aspects of the tradition.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

Transform neighborhoods into a dynamic nighttime environments of temporary, site-specific public art by commissioning artists who work in light, sound, video and projection art work. The event would include light art installations and sculptures as well as interactive and performance-based art. Partner neighborhood groups with arts organizations who can assist with artwork selection through a combination of curatorial and competitive processes.

ART IN THE PARKS

Work with groups interested in commissioning an artist to develop an interactive temporary artwork to coincide with a community celebration or special event at a neighborhood park or series of parks or trails sites. Designed to encourage active participation, the event would engage local residents, institutions, and community groups in the planning, construction, and design of installations and performances.

VACANT STOREFRONTS & BUILDINGS

Empty storefronts and unoccupied buildings are evident throughout neighborhood commercial districts. Work with business district leaders and private property owners who are interested in organizing vacant storefront programs that will make these spaces available to artists for an ongoing series of temporary art installations, artist studios, and community workshops.

Business district leaders could inventory available storefronts and work with property owners and artists to develop projects based on the anticipated duration of the vacancy and the willingness of the owner to provide the space to artists. Activating and animating these vacant properties will help eliminate blight and increase the economic viability of the community.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS: CAMPUS ART AMENITIES

For an innovative, cost-effective approach to providing unique furnishings throughout Oklahoma City public school campuses, a catalogue of prototypical artist-designed seating, litter and recycling receptacles, gates, playground equipment, garden decor, and other amenities could be developed by interested artist coops and artist run organizations. As improvements to campus environments occur, items from the catalogue could be ordered, manufactured, and installed in the landscape to add character, identity, and definition to the school grounds and surrounding neighborhood.

Artist run competitions could be open to self-defined artist teams. One team could be selected to design the amenities in partnership with students, faculty, and landscape maintenance staff. Another option is to select individual teams to work with separate age groups—elementary, middle, and high schools.

SITE-SPECIFIC PROJECTS

A range of other neighborhood-specific public art project options were suggested in interviews and meetings. As the private sector developers and non-profit groups build capacity to carry out their own projects, the following projects could be considered:

- Create series of temporary art installations and video streaming throughout Adventure District facilities.
- Establish a cultural arts center in north Oklahoma City, repurposing existing space that is owned by private developers.
- Commission artists to design tents and floatables for sale to the public to raise funds for the Boathouse District.
- Using Paseo as a model, develop similar arts and culture satellites throughout Oklahoma City neighborhoods.
- Develop a program of rotating art to generate retail business along NE 23rd Street Corridor.
- Create a promenade of artwork along the Oklahoma City trails system.
- Preserve and display artifacts that hold public sentiment and value.
- Identify walls for sanctioned urban street art.
- Encourage pop-up galleries throughout neighborhoods.

NEIGHBORHOOD RESOURCES

The following neighborhood resources can be cultivated as multifaceted partners in advocating for, commissioning, and maintaining public art. Leveraging community and financial resources can result in more artwork along commercial and residential corridors.

COMMERCIAL DISTRICT REVITALIZATION PROGRAM (CDRP)

Administered by the Oklahoma City Planning Department, the Commercial District Revitalization Program (CDRP) provides financial assistance and/or identification of funding opportunities to increase the social capacity and financial sustainability of commercial districts in partnership with their surrounding neighborhoods.

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT DISTRICTS (BID)

Business Improvement Districts (BIDs) help improve the appearance of the area, market local businesses, and host special events that energize the area. They are comprised of a committed group of property owners who define the commercial district, prepare the annual budget, and direct their funds to specified projects and district services. Oklahoma City currently has four BIDs which are Downtown, Stockyards City, Capitol Hill, and Western Avenue.

“Public art distinguishes a community and contributes to its identity.”

STRONG NEIGHBORHOOD INITIATIVE (SNI)

Strong Neighborhood Initiative (SNI) encourages programs that unite the community, inject vitality and foster self-sufficiency. SNI is funded by the City of Oklahoma City through its US Department of Housing and Urban Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME Investment Partnership Program funds.

NEIGHBORHOOD ALLIANCE OF CENTRAL OKLAHOMA

Neighborhood Alliance empowers and educates citizens to become neighborhood leaders. Awards in the amount of $2,500, $1,500, and $1,000 are granted to communities that show they are GREAT Neighborhoods.

ADDITIONAL NEIGHBORHOOD RESOURCES

- Downtown Rotary
- Friends of the Library Metropolitan Library System
- Junior League
- Kirkpatrick Family Fund
- Leadership Oklahoma City
- Linking OKC's Young Adult Leaders
- Oklahoma Arts Council
- Leadership Arts and Cultural District Initiative
- Oklahoma City Beautiful
- Oklahoma City Community Foundation
- The Foundation for Oklahoma City Public Schools
- Oklahoma Visual Arts Coalition

OPPORTUNITIES FOR LOCAL ARTISTS

The artist community in Oklahoma City is talented, diverse, and passionate about their commitment to learning and contributing to the evolution and sustainability of the arts. They are eager for opportunities to spend time together in casual conversation and in a more formal setting where they could meet representatives from arts organizations to brainstorm about potential collaborations.

There is concern that most One Percent for Art project announcements, or “Calls to Artists,” lean towards more established artists. Additionally, a large percentage of local artists work in two-dimensional media and would welcome projects that allow their work to be translated into a larger scale. Artists have encouraged the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs to develop project initiatives under $25,000 to provide an entrée into public art for emerging artists.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Workshops, lectures, and webinars can be offered to artists to support, launch, and sustain successful careers. Artists can learn best practices in the business of being an artist including sessions on administration, financing, contracts, insurance, and marketing. When new public art project opportunities are announced, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs could host sessions on responding to Calls to Artists, Proposal Preparation, understanding application processes and contract issues, forming collaborations, and other relevant issues.

An “Information for Artists” page could be added to the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs website presence that identifies current public art project opportunities, explains how to apply to Project Announcements, and provides information on public art resources for artists. An excellent model is the public art website for the City of San Francisco Arts Commission at <http://www.sfartscommission.org/pubartcollection/public-art-resources-for-artists/> (Appendix K: Public Art Resources for Artists)

Artists can learn a great deal about the selection process by attending Artist Selection Workshops and Arts Commission meetings to observe the proceedings. Because these meetings are open to the public, the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs could send an e-blast to artists on its mailing list encouraging them to attend.

RECOMMENDATION

- Formalize partnerships with Oklahoma Visual Arts Coalition (OVAC) and other artist organizations to provide general resources and professional development training to artists.

ARTIST RESOURCES

The following artist support resources could be cultivated by arts organizations to support and sustain the development of the local artists:

ARTIST IN RESIDENCE PROGRAM

An Artist in Residence program provides the opportunity for an artist to work in a specified environment for an extended period of time. It encourages artists to explore new working methods, create arts-rich learning environments, and develop socially engaging, interactive art experiences in community and educational settings.

Potential host institutions include:

- Public schools
- Myriad Botanical Gardens
- Neighborhood organizations and cultural districts, including Business Improvement Districts
- Parks and Recreation sites and public libraries
- Youth and senior centers
- Homeless shelters and jails
- City Departments, particularly the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs, as a resource for small budget public art projects

MENTORSHIP PROGRAM

Emerging artists have few professional development opportunities in the field of public art. A value expressed repeatedly by those interviewed was the creation of opportunities to attract and nurture emerging Oklahoma City artists. A Mentorship Program offers a resource to local artists by educating them about the public art process through direct hands-on experience. Emerging artists are given the opportunity to work with established public artists on a project from inception to completion and earn a stipend.

Responsibilities for specific aspects of the project are identified by the lead artist. The artist being mentored shadows the public artist in studio, meetings, and presentations, following the course of the project from design through installation. The willing participation of the commissioned public artist is important to the success of this initiative.

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs is to be commended for its current practice of including language in contracts with project artists encouraging them to provide mentorship opportunities to local artists, as exemplified by the Arts District Parking Garage project.

PORTABLE WORKS COLLECTION

A Portable Works Collection involves the acquisition of existing two- and three-dimensional visual artwork by Oklahoma City artists for placement throughout publicly-accessible City facilities for long-term or short-term periods of time. The purpose is to enhance the environment and enable the public to view quality artwork outside a museum setting.

The artwork may include and is not limited to sculpture, painting, mixed media, prints, photography, video, folk art, and traditional and contemporary crafts by emerging and established artists. The review and selection process presents the opportunity to invite curators of corporate collections to view the work of local artists.

ARTIST REGISTRY

An online local artist registry could provide a centralized resource and platform in which artists at varied career levels could expand their audience and publicize their work. It also connects artists to opportunities by presenting their work in a searchable form for organizations, curators, architects, developers, community organizations, individuals, and businesses. The registry should be free to join and free to use.

A framework could be established where each artist inputs her/his own data and updates it as needed. Visual arts organizations could link existing artist directories to the website. Once set up, the directory could operate with minimal administrative oversight with the understanding that the artists—who are eager to have the information centralized, accessible, and current—would keep it updated.

RETAIL OPPORTUNITIES

Oklahoma City has a burgeoning tourist industry, attracting thousands of visitors worldwide to the city. In addition to the plethora of competitive and recreational outdoor activities including river sports and horse shows, many people come to Oklahoma City to take advantage of the exceptional medical, military, aircraft, and energy resources available. Because the city is situated equidistant from both coasts, it is a recurrent vacation destination for many people in the United States.

As mementos of their travels, people like to buy things that tell the story of the places they've visited. This presents an ideal opportunity to feature the work of local artists in retail and gift shops and tourist destinations. This boosts the visibility and livelihoods of Oklahoma City artists while showcasing and celebrating the talent and culture that is indigenous to the city.

PARTNERSHIPS

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs has distinguished itself as a leader in effecting dynamic collaborations and coalitions with arts organizations, businesses, and private developers. Working with Oklahoma City community organizations, institutions, and citizen groups on public art projects and other special initiatives leverages financial and staff resources, reputations, and strengths. Collaborations deliver greater quality, value, and a broader range of public art experiences that would otherwise be impossible.

There is great potential in Oklahoma City for enduring, mutually-beneficial partnerships to support and perpetuate thoughtful and quality public art.

FEE FOR SERVICE

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs manages programs that bring neighborhood groups, public agencies, and community leaders together with artists and designers to find creative solutions to specific urban challenges. These partnerships expand the effectiveness of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs, help people work together to visualize common themes and project opportunities, demonstrate the benefits of incorporating public art into public infrastructure, and ensure that high-quality, community-sensitive public art will contribute to the region's vitality and culture now and in the future. This is clearly evident in the partnerships that Arts & Cultural Affairs has nurtured to date with the Norman Regional Healthcare Authority, the Vietnamese American Community and with other potential public art donors.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Offer public art project management and consulting services on a fee-for-service basis, so the City can provide input and leadership in comprehensive public art planning and quality project development through partnerships with area organizations, institutions, businesses, developers, and other government agencies.

“Art amplifies the tourism experience.”

CULTURAL TOURISM

Cultural tourism is consistently ranked as one of the top three travel activities in the United States. Culture and creative industries are increasingly being used to promote destinations and enhance their competitiveness and attractiveness. Many locations are now actively highlighting their cultural assets as a means of developing competitive advantages in an increasingly competitive tourism marketplace.

The arts can be used to create destinations that encourage people to explore all sections of the city, for linking the arts to community revitalization initiatives, and for tying education and job readiness to the creative sector. A partnership between the public and private sectors could be formed to develop a series of pedestrian and vehicular itineraries and an interactive map of public artwork, museums, arts districts, and artist studios throughout Oklahoma City that would be available online.

RECOMMENDATION

- Collaborate with district organizations, arts organizations and the Convention and Visitors Bureau on marketing Oklahoma City as a cultural destination.

ADDITIONAL OPPORTUNITIES TO EXPLORE WITH LOCAL PARTNERS

Additional opportunities to raise awareness and promote Oklahoma City as a cultural destination include the following:

- Provide public art orientations to bus drivers, taxi drivers, Police Ambassadors, street car drivers, canal boat operators, and hotel concierge.

- Include public art in collateral such as the Oklahoma City Convention and Visitor’s Guide, response-based website, and out-of-town trade shows, as well as State Tourism Office information.
- Integrate public art into tours provided to convention attendees.
- Create themed tours for schools, professional associations, cycling clubs and other special interest groups.

COLLEGES & UNIVERSITIES

Oklahoma City is centered among the region’s top university art programs. A concerted effort to reach out to these younger artist audiences would build relationships between the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs and the future creative and art business community. University programs are also an outlet to source students for temporary projects, technology influenced artworks, and emerging artist opportunities.

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs has established strong relationships with the University of Oklahoma (OU) in Norman, Oklahoma City University (OCU), and University of Central Oklahoma (UCO) art departments. All are highly regarded for the outstanding education and practical knowledge they impart to their students.

The OU art faculty recently began conducting a pilot Oklahoma City Studio to provide the students with hands-on experience in public art planning and project development. They are especially interested in social practice and assisting with neighborhood public art initiatives.

OCU is making a concerted effort to attract the public to their campus, actively promoting special lectures, events, and exhibitions to those outside the university community. In light of their commitment to create partnerships with the public sector, OCU has offered to host an artist lecture series featuring local and out-of-town artists installing work resulting from the City’s One Percent for Art projects. They’d also like to video document the lectures.

Other ideas that were generated in the spirit of partnership, education, and the arts include:

- Participation in student orientations on campus by introducing art students to the work of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs and inviting them to take advantage of the public art project and planning opportunities.

- Collaboration with faculty to integrate public art studies into the curriculum on a recurring basis.
- Development of an independent study option for students to compete for City public art projects.
- Engagement of student interns to research and document history of artworks in Oklahoma City.
- Utilizing the mailing list of art students and faculty for notification of public art opportunities.
- Sponsorship of workshops with and exhibitions of local and out-of-town artists working on One Percent for Art projects in Oklahoma City.

PRIVATE DEVELOPERS

Oklahoma City is home to an enviable cadre of enlightened, forward-thinking developers who are dedicated to the economic health of the city, aesthetic quality of the built environment, and the personal well-being of the people who call Oklahoma City home. They take pride in the positive and productive working relationship between the business community and the local government.

The following ideas were generated by a group of local developers who have independently and consistently supported public art in their respective developments. The developers noted, however, that they would be inclined to acquire more public art if the permit process were easier.

- Private developers could sponsor the installation of large sculptures of up to $25,000 on publicly-accessible private property. Each sculpture would be available for sale with the initial investor having the first right of refusal to purchase the artwork.
- The City could partner with a private developer to contribute additional resources to a One Percent for Art pilot project as an incentive to other developers to follow suit.
- Economic development incentives for integrating art into private development could include include retail sales tax rebates, infrastructure improvements, fee waivers, matching grants for façade improvements, non-cash incentives, and public improvement districts.

“Arts opportunities are a major part of why people stay and live in Oklahoma City.”

PUBLIC ART STAFF RESPONSIBILITIES

Professional staff is crucial to the long-term successful management, continuity, transparency, and accountability of a public art program. A public art director and staff assume the pivotal role of guiding the public art process and coordinating the efforts of a multitude of participants so that the full potential of each project can be realized. Staff must:

- Manage the interests and needs of a varied range of stakeholders including City department staff, City Council, Arts Commission and Committees, private developers, peer professionals, community members, and others.
- Coordinate public information and community outreach, including the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs website.
- Be knowledgeable about the range of artistic possibilities and familiar with local and national resources in the field.
- Facilitate the artist and artwork selection and approval processes, including management of the Artist Registry, pre-qualified Artist Directory, and art inventory databases.
- Represent and defend the interests of the artist and the intended artwork from the beginning to the end of a project while at the same time, understand and balance the interests and needs of all the other players in the public art process.
- Prepare for a public art controversy in the event that one occurs. Develop proactive systems for distributing information, responding to the media, and activating supporters.
- Manage the design, fabrication, and installation of public artwork.
- Anticipate, plan for, and implement the complex layers of competing schedules, information requirements, budgets, and programmatic needs.
- Negotiate contract agreements and develop consensus around highly complex issues and situations.
- Oversee the documentation, care, and maintenance of the City's public art collection.
- Administer the donation of artwork gifts and memorials to the City from private individuals, collectors, artists, foreign cities, or countries.

FORECAST PUBLIC ART: PUBLIC ART TOOLKIT, CONSERVATION AND RESTORATION

forecastpublicart.org/toolkit/tools/conservation.html

The fact of the matter is, once the artwork is installed, its life is just beginning. For permanent projects (lasting several years or more), a smart approach is to involve, if possible, a conservator in the process of planning and design. If this is not done, conservation and restoration will not be far off. Three sample projects illustrate options for an artwork when the work requires conservation or restoration.
